
required for activation of many cell-surface receptors. This paper presents new evidence for a dual role of Cdc42, the prototypical member of the Rho family, in T-cell receptor (TCR) signaling. Induction of T-cell proliferation in response to antigen is blocked by Cdc42 RNAi-induced gene silencing and by a Cdc42-specific inhibitor. In the same cells, TCR-induced activation of tyrosine kinases and C-Jun N-terminal kinase (JNK), a substrate of JNK, was inhibited. The involvement of Cdc42 in TCR signaling is supported by two pieces of evidence. First, C d0c515b9f4
